

PUTTING A SMILE ON YOUR FACE

Confidence, strength and warmth are all conveyed by a smile. But according to Dr Ernest Rex Tan, founder of leading dental establishment Smile Inc.® Dental Surgeons, there's no such thing as a one-size-fits-all version. What can a skilled dentist do? Design a smile that's uniquely yours, bringing out your natural beauty.

A few years ago, the Hollywood grin was all the rage. What it was: dazzlingly white teeth, large and evenly sized. It was so popular that just about every celeb sported one. But the inevitable backlash came when people realised that these LA pearlie-whites appeared unnatural and cartoonish. Worse, they all looked the same.

Ask leading cosmetic dentist and prosthodontist Dr Ernest Rex Tan about the perfect smile, and his response is that there is no such thing. “Every smile is unique and possesses individual characteristics that reflect your personality, preference, facial features and of course, showcases the teeth, lips and gums in well-balanced proportion.”

But that's not to say you have to settle for the gnashers that genes and life gave you. According to Dr Tan, there are four things all good smiles have in common.

SYMMETRY

PROPORTION

The size of your pearlie whites in relation to each other is another important factor that affects the look of your smile. “Teeth need to be proportionate and in addition, the amount showing needs to be proportionate to the gums and lips,” says Dr Tan.

BRIGHTNESS/COLOUR

It might be tempting to go for a paper-white shade, but that's a mistake. Dr Tan says: “Generally speaking, whiter teeth are more appealing but they must be balanced against your skin tone and appear natural. A stark white smile with no characteristics will appear artificial.”

HARMONY

This is where the artistry of an expert dentist comes in. He or she needs to look at the whole face in order to create the most appealing smile. “The curvature needs to harmonise with the shape of the face. The fullness of the smile also has to be in harmony with the lips, gums and face. Too full a smile can make you look toothy, and vice versa,” says Dr Tan.

Choosing your dentist

Dentists are not unlike medical doctors; they have specialties too. Choose someone who focuses primarily on cosmetic and restorative dentistry. And don't be shy to ask for important factors like his experience and credentials, and to view his previous work to ascertain the quality of his results. Finally, make sure that you feel comfortable with him – it's crucial that you feel your dentist listens to and understands your concerns and priorities. That way, you get the smile you want.
